Living and Learning Communities

The Creative Arts Residential Program allows students to promote their passion for creative expression. Students interested in becoming authors, songwriters, musicians, actors/actresses, dancers, and artists are given the opportunity to meet and interact with faculty, alumni and industry leaders to gain first-hand knowledge of how to promote and market their talent to a competitive industry. Students will have the opportunity to showcase their talents to their peers, faculty, staff and local producers.

Creative Arts

In collaboration with the College of Agriculture and Natural Sciences and the College of Engineering, the Going Green Residential program is designed to help set students on paths to finding sustainable solutions to social and environmental challenges. Activities may include assisting in the University’s green-house, fieldtrip to extension sites, farmer’s market, research, recycling projects, etc. just to name a few.

Going Green

The STEAM Residential Program’s mission is to offer students the opportunity to network and live among other students that have declared science, technology, engineering, agriculture and math as their major. Students that participate in this program will benefit from living with students who are taking similar courses; participate in special residential life programming; and take advantage of special tutoring opportunities in the residence halls. The program seeks to stimulate innovative projects that improve instruction and student learning with STEAM majors.

Multicultural Community

The Multicultural Residential Program recognizes the residential halls as one of the key venues for integrated learning initiatives. The general aim is to bring faculty and students together with the purpose of enhancing the foreign language skills and an understanding of world cultures. The program is dedicated to enhancing cross-cultural understanding and foreign language proficiency. This experience is ideal for students planning to study abroad or returning from studying abroad; international and exchange students; students studying foreign languages; and any student simply interested in multicultural affairs.

Leadership Development

The Leadership Development Residential Program is a co-curricular and interactive learning experience that facilitates leadership development. The Leadership Development Program offers a wide variety of opportunities that complement the classroom experience. These opportunities give students a competitive edge as they enter the workforce, apply for scholarships or graduate/professional school. The Leadership Development Residential Program works to create opportunities for students to learn and grow into their leadership abilities, whether it is polishing skills already developed or aiding students who never thought of themselves as leaders in finding their voice. Through programs, events, and mentoring, the program strives to create an engaged group of student leaders in the residence halls who go on to influence others.
