Liners may be budded (grafted), rooted cuttings, seedlings or produced by tissue culture. Liners may be 6 inches to 6 feet tall and come bareroot or potted in a wide array of container types and sizes.

Many nurseries propagate liners for their own use and sell the surplus. It is difficult to list all the nurseries that might have high quality surplus liners for sale in a given year.

No discrimination is intended and no endorsement by the compiler or the University of Tennessee Extension or Tennessee State University is implied. This is intended as a guide to help find the inventory you are seeking to help your business.
