

Jason deKoff, assistant professor of bioenergy crop production and agricultural sciences at Tennessee State University, explains to high school FFA students the process of taking canola seeds and turning them into canola oil and then into biodiesel fuel. The program was part of Agricultural Career Day at the Cumberland County Fair. Students had the opportunity to visit various schools and state agencies in order to explore the career possibilities in agricultural sciences. Crossville Chronicle.